

Northern Bobwhite

(Colinus virginianus)

The Northern Bobwhite is named for their famous whistle, “bob-white.” Unfortunately, bobwhite populations have declined across their entire range, some states experiencing declines upwards of 90%. Bobwhites thrive in early successional habitat such as small agricultural fields, open grasslands, open pine or pine-hardwood forests, and grass-brush grasslands.

Bobwhites mostly eat seeds (examples include legumes and ragweed) and insects. Bobwhites are highly social and live in groups called coveys.

For more information visit www.QuailForever.org